EDITOR IN DISTRESS

It's that time of the year again where we get to celebrate our independence, July 4. I hope most of you realize how well we have it here in the United States of America. Right now young adults in Iran are taking to the streets to protest what they see as a rigged presidential elections. A democratically elected President was recently ousted in Honduras because he wanted to make changes to the constitution. Yes, he was trying to stay in office longer, but the people were going to vote on it. Think about others misfortunes for a minute before you kill some brain cells with lots of beer this weekend.

Even though we live in a free society, we still gotta be vigilant and vocal about our rights. Just this weekend a new gay bar, Rainbow Lounge, was raided by the Fort Worth Police. People were arrested for being intoxicated... they were in a bar! Of course they had been drinking. Yes, the police have a right to check out the paper work of an establishment and also the ages of the customers, but they showed up with paddy wagons. The police were looking to arrest people. They just needed a reason. Some of you don't care, cause it was a gay bar, but what if they walked into your sports bar or biker bar and started harassing you and your friends. Of course there are laws that need to be enforce, but it's not right for you to have to be worried about being arrested at a bar for public intoxication. Maybe your friend is taking you home or you took a cab there. How are they to know if you're planning to drive. A good bartender won't let a drunk customer leave on his own. Keys will be taken and a cab called. Imagine a cop walking in to your house and arresting you because you're drunk and might decide to drive. That's pretty much what happened at the Rainbow Lounge. Oh, this raid also happened on the 40th anniversary of the "Stonewall Rebellion" in New York. It's kind of like the government outlawing your right to drink beer and eat BBQ on the fourth of July.

Anyway, enough ranting for this week. I'll be partying it up with coworkers at my boss' house this July 4. Maybe we'll have some pictures for you. Hopefully I don't puke in the pool. I'll do my best to run to the shrubbery boss.

Joy Division/New Order fans should go see Peter Hook DJ this Thursday, July 2 at The Church inside The Lizard Lounge. $10 21 and up, $15 under 21. 2424 Swiss @ Good Latimer. Also porn star Megan Murray will be there to celebrate her boyfriend, TS porn star Jamie Coxx, birthday. Check out Jamie website at jamiecoxx.com.

Your BOOZ Ever

Ok, I will admit it: Michael Jackson was a musical genius. But Michael Jackson as also a drug-addled freak beyond description. I cannot wait until someone from the morgue sneaks that million dollar pic of him without makeup to TMZ or the Enquirer. I love that creepy-yet-real stuff!

I seriously considered printing a slew of Jackson jokes for my column this week, but I changed my mind.

Let me tell you what happened the day he died: I got home from work, turned on the news to the caption, "Jackson Heart Attack," and thought, "He won't die. Only the good die young." I went into the kitchen for five minutes, and overheard the reporter saying Jackson's father revealed that MJ was in a coma. "He will probably spend a long time there since it resembles his old hyperbaric chamber," I thought and chuckled.

I then went back in front of the TV, and saw that Farrah Fawcett had succumbed to her battle with cancer. This actually made me sad.

Five minutes later, I got a text from my pal Wade that Jackson had died. "Oh, ridiculous rumor mill," I thought as I texted back, "No, Farrah did. MJ in coma."

And then, of course, the news was officially out: Jackson had passed. Was I sad? Yes, I was, but not for Jackson. I was sad for the Corpus Christi beauty who entranced the world with the biggest-selling poster of all time, sad for the woman who finally exposed that nipple (and the other as well) at age 48. Sure, everybody got to go sometime. But moroso I was pissed, because that "alleged" pedophile was stealing our Texas beauty's thunder!

Alright, I just realized that my columns as of late have been bummers. So here is a joke:

Farrah Fawcett died and God asked her what one wish she had. She replied, "For all the children in the world to be safe."

A few seconds later, Michael Jackson died. -YRS4

If I Were King

There are a fair number of adult venues in the greater Dallas / Fort Worth area, but not really a lot of variety. It seems like all the clubs cannibalize ideas from each other. This leads to a lot of homogenization in the adult scene. All the clubs tend to gravitate toward similar ideas, promotions and tastes. Where's the variety? Somebody do something different and unique, for pity's sake. Not that I have any desire to be a manager, I don't have a head for the numbers or the temperament to deal with the executive minutia. Still, if I were in charge, here's the kind of club I'd like to build:

For starters, the primary music format would be country and southern rock. We're in Texas, dammit. Yet, somehow, there isn't one single club that has country as their primary format. If someone were to open up a club that catered to southern good ol' boys, they'd bank. Music policy would be simple: If 'Bubba' don't wanna hear it, we don't play it. And it'd be ass kickin', beer drinkin', hell raisin' country too. None of that sappy slow girly crap. Throw in some AC/DC and Lynyrd Skynyrd for good measure, and you got yourself a music format that you can bank on.

There would be food too. None of this pathetic free buffet stuff, either. If you're gonna serve food, do it right. Get a proper menu, have the food delivered to your table. And, oh yes, the food would be good ol' roadside bbq with all the fixins. Pulled pork, baked potato, beans and throw in a bunch of deep fried anything. My mouth waters, just thinking about it. While you're at it, put some quality steaks on the menu. I'm talking a nice $40 cut of beef, cooked up right with some garlic butter and a side of awesome. Complementary lap dance with your steak while you eat.

The entertainers would double as waitresses. Get a lap dance, and then have her fetch you a drink. She could take your food order while she grinds on you. The girls would be there to serve you in any way you needed them to (within the limits of the law, of course), much like the maid café's in Japan. If you want a lap dance, back rub, food order or just someone to play a game of cards with; the ladies are there to cater to your pleasure. There would be a services menu, of course, which included price lists for things the girls can do for you. Time is money, but there should be a variety of ways that you can spend that time. If you want a girl to feed you grapes while another girl rubs your shoulders and yet another girl fans you with ostrich feathers to keep you cool, you should be allowed that option.

While I'm dreaming, throw in a mechanical bull. That's right, a friggin' mechanical bull. Just imagine getting a birthday lap dance from a girl WHILE YOU RIDE A MECHANICAL BULL WITH HER ON TOP OF YOU. Helz yeah! That's what I'm talkin' about! And, while we're at it, your birthday / bachelor celebration should be more than just a chair on stage with a few girls spanking you. It should be an all night event! Put you on a throne, with a crown and a jeweled chalice to drink from. Let the birthday boy call some shot specials for everyone. Give the man of the hour some real authority. Let him pick some music. It's your birthday, you should be allowed to be king for a day, dammit. How about some royal treatment for a change.

Oh, and utilize those big screen projectors for more than just sporting events. Hook up an Xbox and let the customers play some video games, show some porn to get the customers in the mood, put up a reel of funny youtube clips. Have some variety in the programming. Every other club in town shows sports, and rightly so, but there's no reason that sports is the only thing those projectors should be used for.

And last, but not least; free admission, drinks and lap dances for all ANE Metro contributors. Especially that one guy who writes that kick ass 'DJ Booth' article. I mean, you have to be kind to the press... right?

John J. Dick has been Master of Ceremonies at a number of local Dallas adult cabarets. You can follow his Twitter feed at <http://johnjdick.twitter.com>. And ladies, make sure you tip your DJ well. He tries really hard to take care of you. Make sure you take care of him in return. He has bills to pay too. And don't expect VIP DJ service if you are only willing to tip him table dance prices. He'll thank you for the tip with a smile on his face... but he does keep notes.

Sex Selling For Less Amid Economic Downturn

It's past midnight in downtown Berlin, and the prostitutes pace in front of the Hackescher Markt's stores. Signs of a slow economy are everywhere — a sportswear store offers 40 percent markdowns, and bars advertise discounted drinks.

Like so many other businesses, Europe's largest legalized prostitution industry is having to adapt to the economic downturn. Customers are fewer or more frugal, competition has increased, and more clubs and brothels are offering discounts to drum up business.

Since late 2008, the number of English and American tourists has dropped and the street dynamic has changed, according to one prostitute in her mid-20s who requested anonymity because she did not want her family to know her profession. She still gets customers, she said, but they no longer pay for the extras.

"We have to be a lot more aggressive now," said the woman, wearing pink jeans and a black corset, who has worked the area for three years. "The customers used to come straight to you. Now they don't ask you as much."

Nevertheless, she said, the prostitutes in the area have been sticking to a set minimum price — about euro80 ($110) for sex.

"If he doesn't pay our prices then he can't go home with me," she said, putting her hands on her hips. "That simple."

Prostitution is legal in Germany, with the same rights and benefits as other professions, such as health and unemployment insurance. There are about 450,000 prostitutes nationwide, according to 2008 numbers, with 10,000 in Berlin. Streetwalkers like those in the Hackescher Markt make up only about 3 percent, with the remaining 97 percent working in brothels, massage parlors or out of private residences.

Though the demand for prostitutes' services remains strong, the supply has increased as more people lose their jobs and turn to the profession, said Marion Dellefs, of the German prostitution advocacy group Hydra. The result is increased competition, she said.

In response, clubs and brothels are increasingly marketing themselves either as high-class, exclusive spas, or as bargain basements of delight.

The capital's biggest bordello, Artemis, is one of the former, with a wide variety of attractions. For an entry fee of euro80, guests gain access to a gym, free buffet, a pool and two erotic cinemas. The sex costs extra — euro60 ($83) for 30 minutes, with set prices for a variety of other sexual services. On any given day, the bordello has 60 to 90 women working, said manager Vanessa Rahn.

Jenna, 30, a soft-spoken bottle blonde who works there, left a job in hotel hospitality to become a prostitute two years ago.

"It wasn't a very fun job, and I wanted to try something more interesting and fun," she said, requesting that her last name not be used.

Jenna said she hasn't seen a decrease in the number of her daily customers — usually about 10 men — but they have grown increasingly frugal. She also noted a drop in businessmen customers as fewer attend meetings at a nearby conference center.

"This is what the girls have been complaining about," Rahn said. "The number of customers is pretty much the same, but men only go once or twice to rooms, not three or four times, like before."

However, Artemis is working hard at bringing in customers through incentives such as discount cards and lowered prices for taxi drivers and senior citizens. The incentives have meant an increase in the number of regular customers, Rahn said.

At the other end of the spectrum is Berlin's Pussy Club bordello, which has branches in Heidelberg and Wuppertal.

It opened in mid-2008 with a focus on the discount-minded customer, offering an "all you can sex" flat-rate. For between euro70 and euro100, depending upon the time of day, customers can enjoy any sexual services with an unlimited number of women. For their work, the women are also paid a flat-rate wage.

"All the girls get a daily wage of euro100 to euro250 ($140 to $347), so they don't have to worry about money, which is good in this working atmosphere," manager Patricia Floreiu said in an e-mailed reply to questions. She noted a steady increase in applications since the Pussy Club's opening, attributing this in part to the bordello's flat-rate salary. "Many women in other clubs aren't earning enough anymore, and we offer steady, secure money."

Floreiu said the pricing structure has helped the bordello avoid any problems, despite the global market downturn, and that the number of customers has not gone down.

Back in Hackescher Markt, the American-German prostitute said she was thinking of a change in location, as she bent down to retie the laces on knee-high black patent leather boots with five-inch platform heels. She is planning to head soon to the U.S. to work in East Coast strip clubs, saying there was still ample work there, as well.

"I make more in one night just dancing than on the streets here," she said.

Artemis' Jenna, meanwhile, said she will eventually return to the quieter life working for hotels, but that she is in no rush to leave the high pay and dependability of prostitution.

"This type of job will always be in existence," she said. "People will always have money for fun."

IT'S HARD TO FIND A GOOD DONKEY SHOW

The Weekly Adventures Of OJ Tobias

I love the Fourth of July. It is great. My kids love it, too. So does my reading eye dog. You can duck tape a Roman Candle to the kids' and dog's heads and light them for a more exciting show. Plus they all look like unicorns. Here are a couple of safety instructions for this adventure:

1. Get really drunk.
2. Shave them thoroughly (burning hair smells yucky).
3. Make them a helmet out of tin foil (makes them look even cooler).
4. Hose down the yard with water.
5. Draw a smiley face in your neighbors lawn out of gasoline. Tell the kid that lights the face gets his head put out first.
6. Light the dogs' last. You can never predict what the damn thing's going to do, like jump the fence and run down the street or run under the gas tank of your car.
7. Dial 911 when you light the dogs Roman Candle (the fire department can be real slow).
8. Watch from inside the back door. The projectiles go everywhere.
9. Once the screaming starts and the kids run towards you, lock the door.
10. Have the hose ready to put out your neighbor's house or at least a pitcher of beer to drink so you can piss the fire out.
11. Have your bail money ready in exact change ($4,500 is what it was last year.)
12. Make sure that you call your mom and tell her to pick the kids up at your usual CPS office.
13. Make sure you fire all the rounds out of the AK-47 into the air as the police pull up. That way they know it is empty. They appreciate it so much they let you keep drinking until the SWAT team arrives.
14. Make sure you finish the joint you lit the Roman Candle with (the police never believe it is just a special smelling punk).
15. Make sure you tell the officer that your a "Fking American" and they are a bunch of "Nazi Fks." This may make them doubt their own patriotism. They may even decide just to Taser and beat you for half an hour like a real American Cop before they take you to jail.

Have a Happy Fourth.

I gotta go buy beer and more tin foil. My brother's kids are coming over...

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

chamber. Oh, that's right, garage sales and antique stores ARE the torture chambers!!)

How about tryin' to see who could go to the most HOOTERS in one day. The winner would be the one with the most visits AND the most phone numbers.

And we got some really good drag races and Saturday night dirt track races.

See, we got some great stuff to do while waiting for the sports train to start firing up its engine in August.

Here's an interesting question to chew on: Romo, plus what, makes a leader?

We got a lotta folks out there talkin' how Romo needs to "take control" of the Cowboys from his QB position. My friends, there's a huge difference between taking control or being in control, and being a leader.

Let's start with this: people who've been put in control have usually been placed there by a higher authority and this is generally a supervisory position. I can guarantee that just about any team under a super has got a natural team leader on it. And the act of controlling is not leading. Anybody can order somebody else around, at least while they're of a mind to take it, but leaders can get people not only to do things needed done, but build their motivation, confidence, and enthusiasm along with it.

It's been proven time and again that real leaders get increased participation, better performance, higher morale, lower absenteeism, and higher quality work product. The vast majority of "controlled" situations get the opposite, to one degree or other.

Romo could try to exist by controlling the offense, but that's what he's been doing and was vastly overshadowed by Terrell Owens and his strong personality. A leader has to be a force on the field and in the locker room. A force. A command presence.

The question for the Cowboys and Tony Romo is, does Romo have this in him, and if so, can he develop that forceful personality to lead men?

Along with that, can he, through his skill and effectiveness, gain the respect, trust, and confidence of his team? That's the winning formula: the leaders command, plus the respect, trust and confidence of his team equals higher degrees of success.

Its fun when you're winning and things are going well, but when the situation is tough that's where a true leader is supposed to have command of a situation and has the teams trust to follow him. This is where Tony has to go, and this is edge the Cowboys, or any team, is on.

You ever been sittin' on the back deck of an evening, a drink in hand, all's quiet, when a dog down the way starts barking? Then another mutt joins in. And another. Next thing you know you got a neighborhood full of barkin' dogs and none of the yelpers has the foggiest idea why, they're just having dog fun barkin'.

That's what we're a doin' today, so let's keep barkin' along the fence line.

Which of the professional sports do women ever have any kind of a chance at succeeding in competing straight up with men?

You have to say car racing, whether NASCAR's stocks, or IRL's open car formula's. You can look at the air races, like the Red Bull air show races, but that's still more of an oddity draw right now than a sport. Obviously you can't stack 'em in like the car races, and you got to admit, one wreck and at least someone is guaranteed to die, not exactly the kind of thriller promoters and television can offer to the public.

So with that in mind, can Danica Patrick, or any woman, really succeed in IRL?

I have to say yes. Women more than proved their worth during World War II while being pilots, and while they had to work to get to this point, they are now included in combat air operations.

Women can handle machines. They can focus on both the task at hand while being aware of and paying attention to the machine. This is either the race and car or air combat and plane.

Are they at any more risk of surviving a high speed collision with a wall than a man is? If you don't know the answer to that already, bub, then you need to switch to marbles.

Can they physically keep a high speed race car on the track for a full race since they're weaker than a man? Well, the NASCAR stockers have got power steering, but the Indy Racing League cars, they don't. That's right, IRL cars don't have power steering and Danica races those babies. 200 mph races them.

As far as being weaker is concerned, Scott Dixon is one of the bigger IRL drivers at 5'10" and 150 lbs, so the vast majority of these drivers, male or female, aren't much bigger than jockeys (the horse riders not the underwear). Danica's had 4 top five finishes this season, leading all drivers, so I'd say that she doesn't have a physical handicap for competing in IRL races.

How you like what's been happening with the NBA folk this off season? Been some interesting going on's to get after.

The Mav's. Geez, what a mess. Not a great draft and playing stumblety bumblety with their existing players. Ok, draftees are projects, but We're approaching our July 4th weekend this year like a turtle that's been drinking Red Bull's and vodka. Yep, goin' slow at ninety miles an hour.

Here tiz the beginning of the middle of the summer, we got a whole month to wait for NFL training camps to open, a bit more for NHL camps to open, and a tad more for NBA camps. What in the blue blaze's are we supposed to do for now?

You can join the office pool and pick the winning date for the Rangers colossal collapse.

You can choose betwixt water'n holes, like for swimmin', fishin', or drinkin'.

You can pull on a pair of jeans, cowboy boots and hat, go bare chested, get on your m/c, boot in a bottle of tequila, and head out for the boonies.

You might could head up to Turner Falls and sun bake to roasted condition then jump in arctic ice temper waters to cool down.

You could leave for Houston on a Friday night with a bunch of your buds, then on Saturday morning get onboard a rent a boat and go do some deep Gulf fishing. Stay out all day, then head for Maribelle's that night, and come back home Sunday.

You could get cleaned up and go visit some garage sales and antique stores. Egad, who stuck THAT in here?? (If that's all you can do, just volunteer for the rack at your friendly local torture they could've gotten better than silly putty to work with.

What I think's the most disturbing of news is they keep speaking in terms that suggest they're more than pleased with the players they've got. We can't exactly speak about the players they've gotten rid of since they refuse to get rid of any.

Last season I said it would be a coin toss if they got in the playoffs and would struggle. They barely beat a weakened Spurs team, and got pounded by Denver. If they don't move Kidd and others, like maybe Howard and Barea and more, and don't bring in a strong center, they're doomed. Like, I give them no chance, zero, nada, nunca, nyet, kaputski odds to make the post season.

I was liking Orlando's moves by acquiring Carter from the Nets until Turkoglu decided to opt out of his contract. Yeah, the Magic will more than likely have to go into the luxury tax payments for their first time, but Howard needed some more outside support, not replacing a lost part.

Ok, it's no secret the Knicks want LeBron James, which is why they want to drag Kidd to their kennels this coming season. LeBron will become available next season. I hope the Cleveland faithful aren't over ecstatic about Shaq coming to down because he's nowhere near his younger self, and will not offer the distraction James was hoping to have to free him up. By the Cav's bringing in Shaq they actually helped out the Knicks.

Who's a possible key wildcard in all this? Why, the Mav's Jason Kidd. If the Knicks get Kidd, they'll get James. If Cleveland realizes what's going on and staggers everybody with their chutzpa and capture Kidd, then things will certainly heat up for next season.

Cleveland HAS to get James help or they'll not be successful against the Magic even if they do end up losing the Turk.

So, are the Mav's merely being smug and tight lipped while looking at trade options with New York and Cleveland? Or, are they really intent in keeping this team together? The only real help they can look forward to in the conference is if Houston's Yao Ming's foot doesn't heal. When Yao got hurt in the post season even then, they gave the Lakers all they could handle, and that was while missing McGrady, too.

Right now it looks like the only division opponent the Mav's can take is Memphis, because New Orleans is getting better.

By the way, I've had several readers respond with the idea that Nelson #1 left his son Donnie in play here to sabotage the Mav's. Like, allegedly trying to keep things "calm" and reasoned, which is to say, they haven't moved on any good prospects from either the draft or free agency in years. Why didn't the Mav's go after the Nets Carter instead of letting the Magic have him? Dirk needs outside shooting support, Carter would've provided that. Maybe these conspiracy theory folk have a point....

Readers Response:

Two Dogs:

I've read where the high failure rate of players from successful college programs making it in the pros is because of a fear of losing something of themselves when they change "systems". Like their comfort zone is tied to their talent or something. I know some people don't ever change from adolescence to adult because they don't want to lose the good times they had, but changing from one sports system to another? I think that's just complete nonsense, what do you think?

*Franklin
Dallas*

Franklin:

Fear of change, of the unknown, of failure, hell, fear of success, is a huge obstacle for many people, regardless of their station in life. A prevalent theory for the failure of so many to make it from the collegiate to professional ranks is that the change, not the game or system, is something they can't take. In the tv series Kung Fu, young Cain questions the Master as to that very subject, fearing that as he becomes a man he'll lose what brought him there. In return, Master asks of him: "When the butterfly emerges, is the caterpillar no longer?"

TD

Two Dogs:

Do you think success ruined the Cowboys and Stars? What do they mean by that? How can success ruin somebody? The Patriots sure don't seem to be ruined. What will it take for them to be winners again?

*Madeline
Ft. Worth*

Madeline:

Very few programs can last at the top for a variety of reasons. Like assistant coaches wanting to be promoted on to head their own teams. Players leaving to other teams or retire. Injuries. These are extremely difficult changes for teams to absorb. This is a major reason why when you have a team that lasts successfully at the top for several years they start attracting terms like "dynasty". For the Stars, after the 1999 and 2000 appearances in the Stanley Cup Finals, then chief Armstrong began to dismantle the team, for what he thought was a way to improve it. He failed so badly the team has never recovered. The classic way success has ruined a team has been through arrogance where they feel they should win and not be subject to rules and penalties like "normal" teams are, and eventually the underdogs take them down. As for what will inspire a team to be competitive again? Until the beast for desire for something different begins to prowl inside the current Cowboys, they will not succeed. Same can be said for the Mav's and Stars. It looks like the current Rangers are beginning to experience it.

TD

Two Dogs:

Why aren't any teams trying to acquire receiver Plaxico Burress? Doesn't he deserve the chance to be innocent before proven guilty? This is so typical and so hypocritical. He's one of the greatest receivers of all time and can't play while still in his prime? I think he should sue for the right to play.

*Mark
Bedford*

Mark:

Not sure what others think here, but only 505 receptions for 7800 yards and 55 TD's over NINE seasons, doesn't rank as an all time leading receiver. My book, he's average to at times above average, plus there's a lot of other factors that get a player consideration for top dog honors. And, for that awareness slot in your brainpan, he IS being treated innocent, but that's the legal system side. He's still got to face the NFL for its personal conduct review of him taking an uncensored gun into a public facility. Teams have to ask themselves what the likelihood of him being suspended for any part or all of next season before they shell out some hefty bucks. They also have to consider what that would do to a roster space they could use on someone there'd be no doubts over his presence. There's no rational reason to carry a loaded weapon into a public setting, where innocent bystanders could be injured or killed, so let's get that bum out of the league.

TD

Two Dogs:

Did TO take a put down by a woman? Is that real or an internet "story"?

*Jarveh
Arlington*

Jarveh:

As most of the planet already knows, TO was bashed and harassed by model Joanna Krupa in a reality show called The Superstars. I only bring this up so I can gleefully wallow in a tub of joy that TO finally got bashed like he's been bashing his own QB's for so long. Now Krupa is very pretty, she's got an ego larger than the size of TO's, and with her attitude she's probably not someone to take lightly, or home to momma, but sometimes you just don't get to pick the way a karma debt is paid. There's an old saying that the enemy of my enemy is my friend, but that's not always true. In this case two people who are both egoists and egotists (an extreme rarity amongst us common folk) collided and TO got KO'd by a gal worse'n him. For Krupa: beauty is only skin deep but ugly is to the bone. Roll 'em, Leroy, there's a jackpot comin' tonight.

Twiced diced is quite nice, but bashed hash is better'n mashed.

Did I Ever Tell You The One About... And other strange oddities of the world

Under-Bite Helps Pabst Become World's Ugliest Dog

A prominent under-bite, scrunched face and floppy ears are the hallmarks of a winner. The winner of the World's Ugliest Dog contest, that is.

Pabst, a boxer-mix rescued from a shelter by Miles Egstad of Citrus Heights, Calif., won the annual contest on Friday at the Sonoma-Marin Fair in Northern California.

It was an upset victory for Pabst, who beat former champion Rascal, a pedigree Chinese Crested. Pabst's owner took home $1,600 in prize money, pet supplies and a modeling contract with House of Dog.

Former Mayor In Georgia Arrested For Nudity

Naked time got a little too public for a former Georgia mayor.

Authorities arrested Mark Musselwhite and charged him with public indecency last weekend after state Department of Natural Resources officers found him sitting nude at his Rabun County campsite.

Officers had received a complaint about a naked man walking along a nearby road earlier in the day, but the 43-year-old Musselwhite said he was not the same man. Musselwhite told the DNR officer he had been swimming in a nearby creek.

Couple Accused Of Assault Using Cheetos

Authorities said a couple got into a fight using Cheetos. The Bedford County Sheriff's Department said a 40-year-old man and 44-year-old woman became involved in a 'verbal altercation.' Somehow, the orange puffy snacks were used in the assault.

Deputies said they were charged with domestic assault. No one was hurt.

Cops: Man Deposits $200 With Pot, Cocaine At Bank

Authorities said a man using the drive-through at a Tallahassee bank deposited $200 and a small bag containing marijuana and cocaine. Police said an employee at the Wachovia Bank called police Wednesday after the unusual deposit. An officer arrested a 38-year-old man and found the remnants of three marijuana cigarettes inside his vehicle.

Stoned Wallabies Make Crop Circles

The mystery of crop circles in poppy fields in Australia's southern island state of Tasmania has been solved -- stoned wallabies are eating the poppy heads and hopping around in circles.

"We have a problem with wallabies entering poppy fields, getting as high as a kite and going around in circles," the state's top lawmaker Lara Giddings told local media on Thursday.

"Then they crash. We see crop circles in the poppy industry from wallabies that are high," she said.

Many people believe crop circles that mysteriously appear in fields around the world are created by aliens.

Poppy producer Tasmanian Alkaloids said livestock which ate the poppies were known to "act weird" -- including deer and sheep in the state's highlands.

"There have been many stories about sheep that have eaten some of the poppies after harvesting and they all walk around in circles," said field operations manager Rick Rockliff.

Australia produces about 50 percent of the world's raw material for morphine and related opiates.

Monkey Urinates On Zambian President

A monkey urinated on Zambian President Rupiah Banda as he spoke to journalists at a news conference on Wednesday.

Banda softly shouted: "You (monkey) have urinated on my jacket," and paused as he looked up to see the animal playing in a tree just above his chair.

"Perhaps these are blessings," he said continuing his address amid laughter from the audience of journalists and diplomats at the State House presidential offices.

Several monkeys play around the grounds of Banda's residence and his office. There are also many species of antelope and birds in the State House grounds.

Woman On Tracks To 'Clear Her Mind' Hit By Train

Birmingham police said a 22-year-old woman has suffered a broken leg after being hit by a train. Officer Lawrence Billups said the woman told police she was lying on the tracks "to clear her mind" when the train approached around 7 a.m. Sunday.

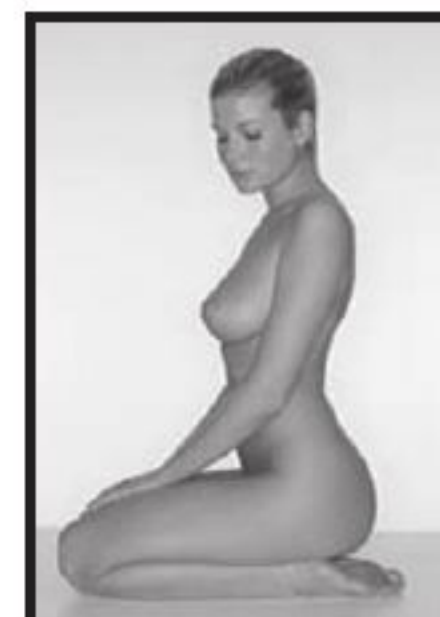

Billups said the CSX train was moving about 10 mph when it hit her. The train's operator told police he tried to stop.

Cops: Woman Takes Kneeling Woman's Cash In Church

Nassau County police said a congregant at a Long Island church disregarded at least one of its commandments: Thou shalt not steal. Police said the 46-year-old woman reached over a pew and took cash from a purse while its owner knelt Sunday at Our Lady of Hope Roman Catholic Church in Westbury. Police said an usher saw the theft, and officers stopped the woman as she left the church.

Police said they determined the same woman stole cash from another worshipper's purse while that victim took communion May 10.

The woman has been released on an appearance ticket after being arrested on petit larceny charges. She faces up to a year in jail if convicted.

Keeping My Cool in the Heat of Summer... Cheaply

By Richard Harmon

According to Eric A. Taub technical writer at The New York Times flat panel TV's are quickly disappearing from store shelves. He states the prices are "racing toward bottom" and are approaching commodity status but fails to mention the impact of the change to digital TV. Anyone can appreciate a longer life, a better picture quality, and improved viewing angles. I, though, suspect neither The New York Times nor any of their overpaid writing staff fully understands the true impact of the current recession or the cost of cooling a home in our sweltering temperature enhanced blight zone.

When buying a TV there is a single factor I (unlike most consumers) used as primary driving factor for LCD vs Plasma Vs Projection sets. The worst LCD uses a massive amount less power than any other form of TV. Numbers are nothing less that astounding. Our MASSIVE 65" Sharp LCD uses around 25-35% of the power of a friend's antiquated obsolete 24" CRT TV. It uses 65-75% of the power of a "like sized" Plasma & about 50% of the power of a Projection Unit. At least Mr. Taub got it right in saying there is really no such thing as an LED set. He explained the LED just an LCD set which uses LED's as a source of backlighting instead of the more expensive to operate florescent backlighting for LCD sets. You can bet anyone as cheap as this reporter could not find an LED model in the TV's he was considering!

The savings over my friend's old set don't stop there, there is almost 0 heat produced by our LCD TV and additional heat load produced should be a major factor considered for any electronics of appliance here in DFW! In this important consideration, while official numbers are not published, the LCD also widely "outshines" the plasma and is notably better than an LED unit.

In a bow to technology I was forced to succumb to historic scientific methodology (?). I tested this by placing my hand near the operating sets in the store while shopping. I was shocked that the LCD set had been operating all day, as there was so nearly no heat being produced. My hand was warmed by the LED & nearly made uncomfortable by the Plasma TV. Heat never produced inside my home need never be removed by an expensive to operate A/C unit!

The electric bill with A.C. for many homes of our square footage here in the greater DFW area is $700+ during the hottest time of the year. We've never gone over $400. I suspect I've also (greatly?) decreased the heat load being produced inside our dwelling by going to the tankless hot water heater. Even though the water heater is a closet inside the attached garage the separation between it and our cooled area is but a 2X4" wall. Yes, we saw an improvement of our cooling bills for the house despite the fact the water heater is powered by natural gas. I'd bet no one has investigated the increase in heat load by all those stored BTU's in the stored hot water of a conventional hot water heater!

On the same subject, the year around cost of heating & cooling an all electric home is much greater (in our area and most others as well I'd bet) than a similar sized home which has the interior space & water heated by natural gas. It seems that each time we change energy from one form to another there is some level of waste. Thus when we change gas into electricity there is waste as it must first be changed into heat if a steam turbine is used as the generator, or first into Horse Power if using a gas turbine.

The energy is changed into electricity prior to being wire transmitted to our homes. This transmission activity has a loss rate (measured as resistance) over those miles of wires. Should we even mention the % profit needed by the additional firm; the electric company? In much of the US the electricity is generated from clean natural gas, which is bought from another profit needing firm the gas company.

Thank you modern world, but on this issue I'll be correctly termed a Luddite. I'd far rather directly generate my own space & water heating needs via a far more simple ancient technology free of a moving parts or the second layer of profit; the flame! As a spin-off I'll also reduce the amount of labor and maintenance required for transmission to our home. The simple pipe wins out over the labor intensive network of wires and transformers in this one, the heating use of power.

I really don't like the whole green movement & don't believe in global warming. Unlike Al Gore (and perhaps also) G.W. Bush, I didn't pick the TV based upon helping the environment, being up to date or even sparking the economy. I bought an LCD set for a purely altruistic reason, my pocket book! That said, I strongly suggest that no matter if my fellow residents of the greater U.S. South & Southwest wish make a positive impact on the environment, or just reduce their bills, they get off the couch in front of their TV. Toss it away (in the responsible manner) and go buy a new money saving unit!

Oh well, I must now quit patting myself on the back & go back to chasing a more energy efficient home. I have 3 more windows & a door in need of additional calking & some more sealing. Why oh why, can't I talk my wife out of loving these stupid French back doors?

Pa. Man Faces Obscenity Charges for Blaring Porn at Kids

A 27-year-old man in Philadelphia suburb Phoenixville has been charged with one felony obscenity violation and two misdemeanors for blaring the soundtrack of a porn movie in order to chase children off his cul-de-sac.

The Associated Press reports that Michael Buck had the police called on him May 31 by appalled neighbors who claimed they could hear the explicit audio a block-and-a-half away.

Buck has a preliminary hearing scheduled next month. Detective Tom Goggin said Buck previously filed a complaint about the children he was attempting to shoo off, but that there is nothing criminal about their playing outside.

Reel Wife: Judge Torpedoes Release of Danielle Staub's Sex Tape

A judge has stopped the release of a sex tape featuring one of the stars of the Bravo reality show The Real Housewives of New Jersey.

As reported Monday by AVN.com, the ex-boyfriend of the program's Danielle Staub, Stephen Zalewski, told the tabloid Star that he planned to market a sex tape of the couple. It's been also suggested Staub had aspirations to appear in Playboy and the publicity surrounding such a tape would send her on her way.

FEELING DIRTY

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

But Staub, a 46-year-old divorcee and single mother, didn't want to see the sex tape released and filed a restraining order. On Wednesday, at the Passaic County courthouse, State Superior Court Judge Thomas F. Brogan ordered an injunction banning the release of any sexually explicit video — or pictures — of Staub and Zalewski until a hearing scheduled for July 21, reports The Huffington Post.

Zalewski, 27, who did not appear in court, was also ordered to produce all copies of the video and photos of Staub.

Staub also filed a lawsuit against Zalewski seeking damages for invasion of privacy, defamation and infliction of emotional distress.

Apple Approves Vibrator App for iPhone

Some are calling it the first X-rated app approved by Apple, though that X-factor is surely in the mind of the user. Nonetheless, MyPleasure.com's MyVibe vibrator application is getting noticed as a massage device ... or something more.

Gizmodo reports that sex researcher Dr. Debby Herbenick has given the free app a whirl and deems it "fun."

According to Herbenick's evaluation, the app offers a simple on/off button and up and down arrows to control vibrations, with settings that range from short, quick pulses using smaller numbers to longer, slower throbbing via higher numbers, up to 100.

"The intensity of the vibration MyPleasure could use for this app is obviously limited by the amount of vibration that the iPhone offers, so the orgasmic potential of the MyVibe app is similarly limited," Herbenick wrote on her site, My Sex Professor.

MyPleasure will keep the app as a free download with viral marketing through its website. No versions are planned for other Smartphone platforms, though the company is working on other sexual lifestyle apps, from games to educational offerings.

Apple Yanks 1st Porn App From iTunes

The first porn app ever to go up for sale on iTunes may be the last.

Apple has confirmed it pulled the Hottest Girls app from its iTunes store shortly the app was updated with images of nude and topless women.

"Apple will not distribute applications that contain inappropriate content," Apple spokesman Tom Neumayr told Macworld magazine Friday in a public statement also reported in other media.

"The developer of this application added inappropriate content directly from their server after the application had been approved and distributed, and after the developer had subsequently been asked to remove some offensive content. This was a direct violation of the terms of the iPhone Developer Program. The application is no longer available on the App Store."

Apple updated its OS 3.0 iPhone software earlier in June to include parental controls that restrict some applications to people over a certain age. That led to widespread speculation online at sites such as MacRumors.com that the door would soon be open to porn.

Last Wednesday, Hottest Girls began boasting its "completely naked pics," billing itself as "the first and only app with nudity." The first version of the iPhone and iPod Touch app was released in May, and included photos of scantily clad women, but none who were naked. The app, available as of last week for download to customers 17 and older for $1.99 on iTunes, claimed to have more than 2,000 images of "the finest looking girls" that would be automatically updated periodically.

On Thursday afternoon, a note posted on the website of Hottest Girls developer Allen Leung said that the app was "temporarily sold out" as the servers distributing the app were crashing due to high traffic. However, it promised the topless images would still be there when sales resumed.

Porn Star Porn Review With Chapel Waste

Still with the scent of fresh sea eels on my mind I take the endeavor of writing the next section of the collection of John Holmes. I was at our editors Gil's house this last week spending quality time with him, his roommates and a bottle of Jim beam. Scenes: 7

Length: 81 minutes

Starring: Angel Kelly, Bambi Allen, Carolyn Connolly, Karen Summer, Mauvais DeNoir [NonSex], Tiffany Blake, Vanessa D'Oro, Gary Blu Stone, Joey Silvera, John Holmes

Synopsis:

John Holmes is out to cheer up his little brother after his unfortunate break-up with his very well endowed fiancée, I mean it, these tits are huge and well rounded with a perky uplifting feeling that could leave a smile on a dead mans face. So John decides that Saturday nights is time for getting some gash, therefore hence the title Saturday Night Beaver, which if your a fan of the actors saying the title of the movie be excited, because they say it a lot! It all ends with John's little brother and his big titted fiancée getting back together and the brother anointing this union with his holy sacrament all over this chicks face.

Hottest Scene:

The extra scene, 2 girls one guy, its beautiful and I love some hot chicks really getting each other off. None of that fake kissy kissy softcore lesbian crap. These chicks are really chowing down and enjoying it and the guy who comes in later seems to be a enthusiast of that nature as well.

Bonus Features:

The bonus features are the same on this DVD, action stash after action stash! Exciting stash ride! Stash rides boat into other boat! Two stash collide into harmony! Its stashtastic. stash

Rating:

4 out of 5 mustaches. Very close to a Tom Selleck. The actors look like there really getting off and enjoying themselves and the male actors look as they really do enjoy getting the girls off, very pleasing. I am kinda getting used to the idea of genital beards everywhere though there's much less in this film. This is definitely a great porn, classic, sassy and lots of girls.

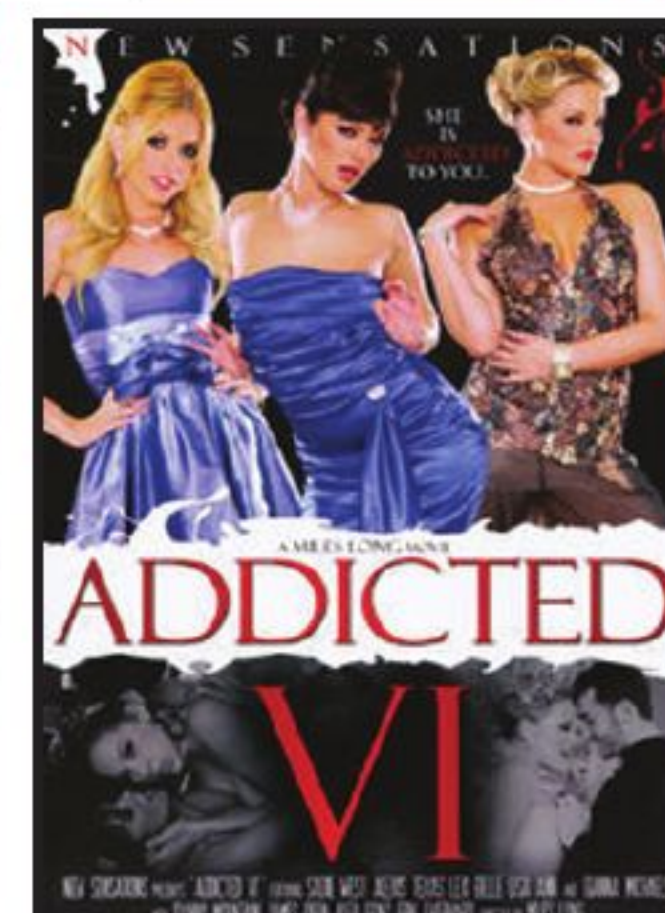

Porn Star Profile: Sadie West

New Sensations exclusive Sadie West brings a genuine passion to her performances. "I love what I do. I'm just real happy to be able to have an opportunity like this and make a living this way and be comfortable," says West.

She started her adult career in June 2008 and has performed only in titles for New Sensations and its sister company Digital Sin. Born in Riverside, Calif. and raised in San Diego, Mexico and Ohio, West likes to hike, ride horses and do oil painting when she's not on set. She lists the Sadie and Friends series as one of her favorites as well as her scene with Gianna Michaels in Addicted 6.

"I like passionate, kinky sex. I love it when two people have a connection and their sex is fun," she says. "Eye contact is important. I like falling-off-the-couch-and-still-be-fucking kind of sex."

Bong Load Girls Vol 1 Punk Productions

If you've just been saying no, maybe the Bong Load Girls can convince you to change your tune. Rob Rotten and Punx Productions bring you seven of the cutest little stoners ever to pick up a pipe and smoke a bowl – and if you ever wondered how to find the kinds of girls that just can't resist a fattie, well, hold onto your hand-tooled glass waterpipe and your hardon, because these chicks can't say no to either kind. Jamie Elle, Jeannie Marie Sullivan, Scarlett Pain, Kat, Daisy Tanks, Kaylee Lovecox and Ruby Knox show you how to make a hit with the kind of girls who like a hit or two – or three or four! This gonzo comedy from the man who brought you Swallow My Children and The Texas Vibrator Massacre might leave you wondering whether to laugh or jack off, but it'll make you want to do both!

Seven super hot stoner chicks in five epically outrageous sex scenes! This movie will give you more than just the munchies!

Jana Cova's Juice Digital Playground

Watch Jana Cova in four deliciously mouthwatering scenes, rich with innuendo, including a heart-pounding anal scene with Alektra Blue. There are strokes a plenty with Jana burying her mouth deep in the muffs of Carli Banks, Lena, and Celeste Star. The girls explore their bodies and finger their holes. Kinky stars Audrey Bitoni, Alexis Love, Mikayla and Paulina James thirst for cock, adding four intense boy / girl scenes to the mix. "Jana Cova's Juice" is an over the top, breathtakingly beautiful, insanely hard, erotic experience everyone will remember for a long time!

Fishnets # 10 Zero Tolerance

XXX's hottest, nylon-wearing nymphs walk their long and sexy legs straight into your hearts. You won't be able to contain yourself as these sex-starved sluts bare their perfectly toned thighs and invite you deep inside. With their legs glistening and mounds quivering, they're begging you to ram and slam them with your rock-hard rod. Whatever you do – don't blow your load inside, 'cause these hot blooded whores want your warm wad to soil their sexy stockings!

AIN'T NOTHIN' BUT A C-STRING!

So, in my last article, I told you all about the Lollie Bombs burlesque troupe from Dallas and their show on the 19th and 20th. I sure hope most of you went, because it was not to be missed! On my way out the door, I had realized that I had never actually WATCHED a burlesque show, but had always been in one. This was quite the treat for me, and the other fans who came out to the sold-out show. The Bombs provided amazing entertainment, with clothes flying, pasties twirling, and porno mags being ripped to shreds (much to the chagrin of most of the male crowd.) I was also picked to "pin the pasty" on my favorite Lollie! Best part was that I was blindfolded and it turned out that the "Lollie" was actually a man from the audience wearing a bra! It was great, he didn't seem to mind me feeling him up too much! Keep tabs on the Lollies for their next show at www.myspace.com/lolliebombs.

Miss Nude 2009

By: Ms. Misha Moré

This year's version of Miss Nude 2009, was finally back at Bazooka Showgirls where it started 10 years ago in 1999. Producer Shawn Simms started this again after a five year hiatus. This show has launched many careers. Past winners include Christine Kerrington, Aspen Reign, Lexie Lamour, Nicole Tyler, Schevelle, and Naomi Knight.

This was an open contest to locals and national features. The contest kicked off with Round One beginning on Wednesday June 17, and ran nightly through Saturday June 20 ending with the finals contest and the crowning of Miss Nude 2009. Judging was based on: face, body, stage presence, show talent, creativity and overall show. This contest was a wild time and I'm glad to have it back at its original venue.

Bazooka's Showgirls is located in the trendy Crossroads Arts District—just two blocks from the Power and Light District. Bazooka's Party starts at 11 AM weekdays and runs into the wee hours every night. It is located next door to the venerable Bulldog Bar. Bazooka's is surrounded with loads of free parking.

I would like to thank Rick Ryan, Dick Snow, the Owner, Botch, General Manager and staff of Bazooka's Club for their time that night. We all had a great time! For Moré information on this club call: (816) 816-421-1915 or go to: www.bazookasshowgirls.com.

SEX IN THE NEWZ

John Edwards' Sex Tape Rumor

A former aide to John Edwards claims the ex-senator and his mistress made a sex tape, according to someone who saw the book proposal.

Former aide Andrew Young -- who signed a deal with St. Martin's Press to pen a tell-all book -- says in his proposal that he is not the father of mistress Rielle Hunter's daughter and that the ex-senator, who has denied paternity, is the dad, a source told the New York Daily News.

Young claimed the baby was his and took in then-pregnant Hunter to live with his wife, Cheri, and their three children. Edwards began the long-term affair with Hunter during his 2008 presidential campaign.

The former aide moved to a new home in California after Hunter delivered the baby and was unpacking when he stumbled on a video tape, the News reported.

The alleged sex tape shows Edwards and Hunter, who was hired by the campaign to videotape the candidate's campaign, according to the paper.

Hunter also confided to Young that she and Edwards talked about getting hitched if the candidate's wife Elizabeth Edwards, who was suffering from cancer, were to die, an insider told the Daily News.

Young also claims in the proposal that Edwards often disagreed with running mate John Kerry during the 2004 presidential campaign. And President Obama promised Edwards the attorney general position if he didn't get the vice presidential nomination before Edwards fessed up to his tryst, according to Young.

Cops: Prostitute, Frito-Lay Worker Agreed On Exchange Of Oral Treats

Lahoma Sue Smith, 36, copped a plea last week to a prostitution charge for accepting a box of Frito-Lay chips in exchange for oral sex. According to the below Oklahoma City Police Department report, John Faron Johnson told cops that he informed Smith that he did not have any money, but that she "agreed to give him a 'blow job' meaning oral sex, for a box of chips." Johnson, a Frito-Lay employee, provided Smith with a case of chips he valued at $30. Following her February arrest, Smith, pictured in the mug shot at right, told police that she had a few prior prostitution busts. At her sentencing last week, Smith was ordered to pay a $1142 fine. Last July, with gasoline prices climbing, a Kentucky woman was arrested for accepting a $100 gasoline card in exchange for sexual favors.

French Banker's Lover Convicted

A Swiss court has convicted the lover of influential French banker Edouard Stern of murdering him after a sado-masochistic sex game. In its ruling, the court rejected the defence team's argument that the woman, Cecile Brossard, had committed a crime of passion.

Ms Brossard, 40, had confessed to shooting Mr Stern in his luxury flat in Geneva in 2005. He was found in a skin-coloured latex suit pierced with four bullet wounds.

Court papers showed her confessing to killing Mr Stern in a row over $1m, which Brossard had demanded as "proof of his love for her". He had transferred the money but then had it blocked.

Brossard admitted to cleaning up the scene of the crime - reportedly littered with sex toys among expensive antiques - before throwing the gun into Lake Geneva.

Busty Barmaid Prepares For Topless Skydive

Busty barmaid Charlotte Robinson is gearing up for a skydive with a difference. The 24-year-old, from Catterall in Garstang, will jump 14,000ft from a Turbine Porter aircraft - topless.

The bubbly mother-of-one will be strapped to the front of an instructor and will freefall at more than 120mph before the parachute opens. She is hoping the jump, at the Black Knights Parachute Centre, Hillam Lane, Cockerham, will raise hundreds of pounds for the North West Air Ambulance.

She said: "I don't know if I'll hurt myself - I might do because I'm a 36GG."

A spokesman for the Black Knights Parachute Centre said: "We've had girls previously that are raising money for charity."

"There's not a lot for anyone to see - the only people that will see anything are the people in the aircraft."

Michelle Pfeiffer and Kathy Bates Call For Legalized Prostitution

In a story that has had no pickup to date from the mainstream press, Michelle Pfeiffer and Kathy Bates are quoted by ContactMusic.com as calling for prostitution to be legalized after playing historical hookers in a new period movie.

The pair play 1920s French courtesans in the film Cheri directed by Stephen Frears'. ContactMusic reports that the risque subject matter has prompted them both to question why the 'world's oldest profession' has been banned throughout most of their native America.

Pfeiffer says, "There is an argument to be made for providing some protection for prostitutes. It would solve a lot of problems for them. They're going to do it anyway." Her co-star Bates agrees: "For health reasons, it would be better for people to enjoy those pleasures."

The actresses are not the only ones calling for legalization, back in April we reported that English actress Dame Helen Mirren called for legalized brothels.

News, Rumors and Gossip

Obama To Protect Transgender Federal Workers

The Obama administration is moving forward with federal guidelines to protect transgender workers, the New York Times reported. The new protections are still a couple of months away, but the administration confirmed Tuesday the groundbreaking non-discrimination rules will be included in an updated federal handbook for managers and supervisors.

Last week, President Obama signed an executive order extending a handful of benefits for the spouses of gay and lesbian federal workers, but stopped short of including pension and health care benefits. The memorandum also directs the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to update federal guidelines within the next 90 days.

The National Center for Transgender Equality, a transgender rights group, announced last week that OPM officials had confirmed to them that the new guidelines would include transgender protections.

While the president signed the gay federal benefits memo in a very public Oval Office ceremony, officials have been less forthcoming about the new transgender provisions, possibly in an attempt to mollify criticism.

Gay groups have criticized the new federal benefits as too little, too late.

Texans Loosen Up On Gay Marriage

Texas voters are not ready to say "I do" but they are warming up to recognizing gay and lesbian relationships.

Texas Lyceum's third annual poll reveals that Texans support legalizing gay unions by a whopping 57%. But when asked specifically about gay marriage, only a quarter of respondents agreed.

Pollsters asked respondents their opinion on granting civil unions for gay couples and gay marriage. They did not include a domestic partnership, a vague term that in Cleveland grants zero guaranteed benefits but nearly equates with marriage in Washington State.

Thirty-six percent of self-identified Democrats support gay marriage, the poll found, compared to only 14% of Republicans. However, Republicans remain a majority in Texas.

In 2005, a large majority (76%) of Texans voted in favor of placing a gay marriage ban in the Texas constitution. The amendment bans both gay marriage and civil unions.

Author Condemns Gay Rights Movement, Calls It 'Evil'

Controversial anti-gay author Scott Lively has released a second book that condemns the modern gay rights movement, calling it "evil."

Lively's second work is titled Redeeming the Rainbow and is available as a free download at DefendTheFamily.com.

The "gay agenda," Lively writes, is an agenda to defeat Christianity, and goes on to invite readers to discriminate against gay men and lesbians.

"[H]omosexuality involves voluntary sexual conduct that has negative personal and social consequences. It is perfectly reasonable and responsible to discriminate against homosexuality on religious, moral, sociological and public health grounds."

Lively is the founder of Abiding Truth Ministries, a group listed as a hate group by The Southern Poverty Law Center, a civil rights organization that tracks hate groups in America. A claim Lively denies.

Last year, Lively caused a stir with publication of The Pink Swastika: Homosexuality in the Nazi Party, in which he asserts that gays, particularly men, played a key role in elevating the Nazi Party in Germany. He then goes on to link the modern gay rights movement to events that took place in Nazi Germany, arguing that gay rights are "dangerous."

Demonstrators Protest Police Raid On Gay Bar

Protesters upset with the way police conducted a raid on a gay nightclub rallied in downtown Fort Worth.

Seven people were arrested for public intoxication during the raid on the Rainbow Lounge early Sunday. Protesters said one person was seriously injured and excessive force was used.

Police disputed the accusation of excessive force and said the department would thoroughly investigate any allegations. The raid was one of three bar checks conducted by police and agents from the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Police said two intoxicated individuals made sexually explicit moves toward officers and a third grabbed a TABC agent's groin. Several patrons told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the officers weren't assaulted.

About 100 protesters gathered Sunday night.

Gay Pride Parade Marks 40 Years After NYC Uprising

Decades after a riot at a Greenwich Village bar sparked a movement for equal rights, gay New Yorkers celebrated their gains at Sunday's gay pride parade and lamented the state has not legalized same-sex marriage.

The annual march down Fifth Avenue commemorated the Stonewall rebellion of 40 years ago, when patrons at a gay bar resisted the police. The several days of disturbances that followed the uprising became one of the defining moments of the gay rights movement.

The celebration was tempered by the knowledge that other states, including Massachusetts, Connecticut and Iowa, have legalized same-sex marriage before New York.

Gov. David Paterson said he remains hopeful that the state Senate will pass a same-sex marriage bill — if it can resolve the partisan stalemate that has paralyzed it.
